BARNET.

Advice for Arbutus Hunters.

The trailing arbutus, which has bloomed so profusely in the decline, and by way of a suggestion before another season, if the lovers of this beautiful flower would exercise more care when they gather it, we should appreciate it very much, as want of care in picking this flower has caused it to grow alarmingly less on our hillsides and woods in the last few years. It should not be pulled up by its long roots but broken or cut off with more care. The hope of having this lovely flower in future years depends upon this. Will all the boys and girls bear this upon their mind and the strangers also who visit our hillsides each springtime.
